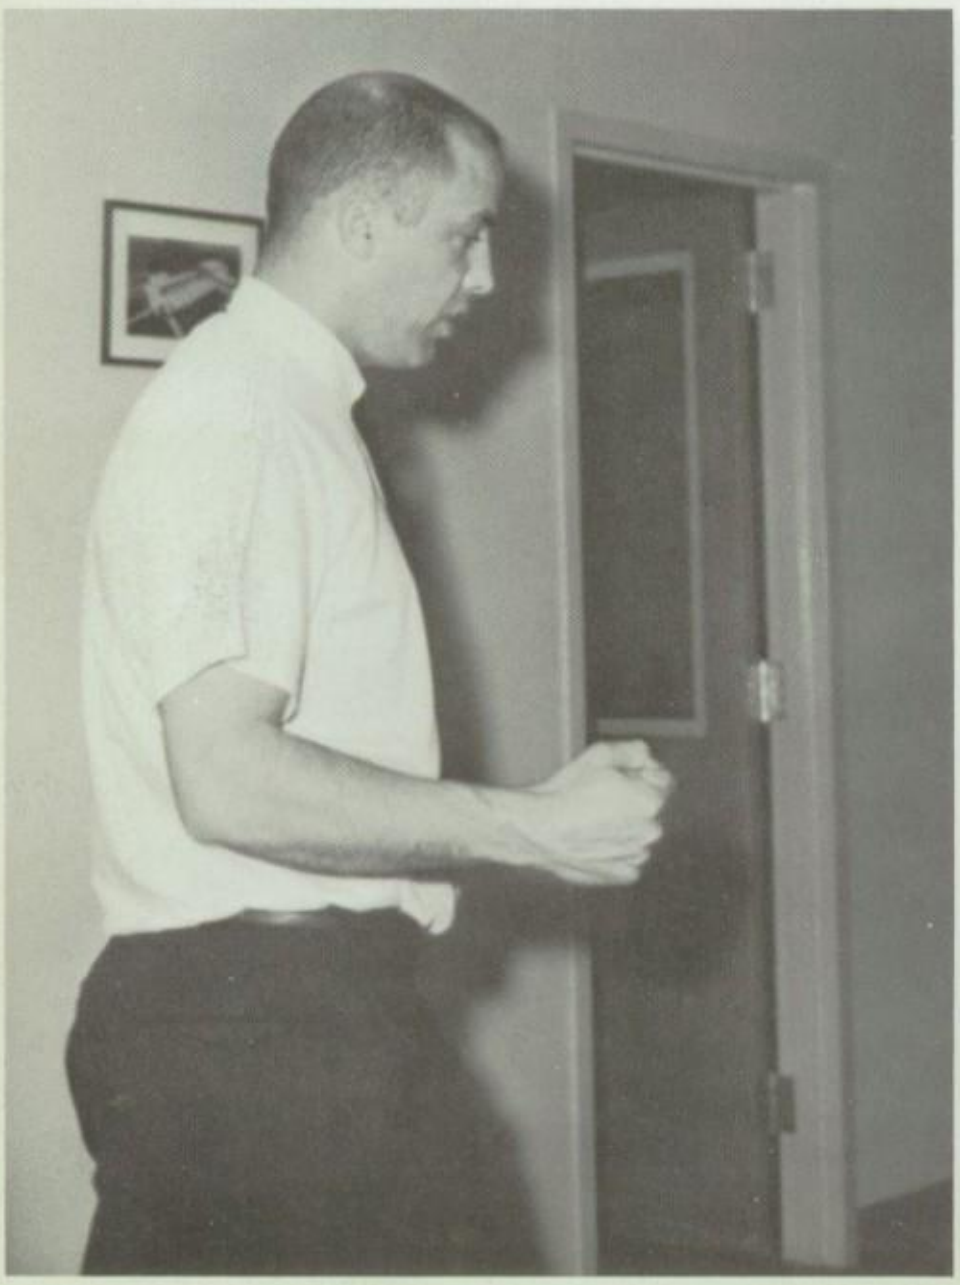
Banks High School represents living, moving, breathing, learning, growing and developing. Behind every face seen lives a completely individual personality unlike that of any other.

During these years exists a struggle between childhood and adulthood with each student continually changing, both physically and mentally, developing into tomorrow's leaders. Influences of adults in the surrounding environment help in shaping us and guiding us toward truth or deceit.

If we are taught during this time to accept only those things which we can honestly justify as right in our minds and think out every statement's validity by our own accumulated wisdom, our schooling thus far has been effective.



He was not just a Vice-Principal, not only another teacher at Banks, Mr. James Kohl was a friend.

He saw the importance of planning, organizing projects thoroughly to assure success.

He could have easily solved many of our problems for us but he knew the value of students learning responsibility and leadership through personal challenge and experience.

As a teacher, he constantly encouraged students to search for answers and solutions, to carry out plans.

As a coach, he strived to guide his young athletes a little closer to manhood.

As administrator, he worked to build and maintain Banks High as a school any student would be proud to call his own.

He showed deep concern for Student Government and gave students involved every opportunity to make major decisions and express views and opinions toward correcting adverse situations.

His great worth as administrator, teacher, and friend wasn't fully recognized or appreciated until, at last, it was removed from Banks High School, altogether.

Times change, old makes way for new, Banks is a better place today for having known Jim Kohl.

James A. Kohl

School Brings Both Light-Hearted . . .

. . . And Serious Moments

Extra-curricular activities play an important part in the well-rounded high school education that a student should obtain. Active participation in clubs gives students the opportunity to have a taste of individual responsibilities and cooperation perhaps not experienced in other areas of school. Social events give students a time for relaxation plus development of skills in human relations.

Activities

Academics

The main importance in academics lies in learning pertinent knowledge which is essential for living in society. Proper education stirs inner energies and emotions to help in the evolution of outer ideals and actions. Skills emerge and are enlarged upon. However, set ideals can't be formulated nor opinions made without basic knowledge. Thus, the academic program fulfills one of the fundamental needs of a person's life.

Seniors

In the last part of the Senior year, childhood has almost ended and adulthood is just around the corner. By the time a student reaches this stage in his life there are many decisions concerning himself and his future goals to be made. He has learned, finally, how little of the world's vast knowledge supply he really holds.

These are the upper underclassmen, filled with growing pains and unlimited energy and enthusiasm. Life is full of fun and adventure, not holding a very large supply of problems for these students.

Freshmen

Upon entering high school as a Freshman, a new way of life evolves. Many times grade school friends are completely forgotten; new friendships emerge and grow. Most of the childish habits carried on through the years must finally be dropped in order to fit into the newly established surroundings. It will take time and patience, but one day these timid freshmen will take over the leading position of Seniors.
